

8 THINGS TO DO IN JULY

Author: Abigail Stone

July really feels like the start of summer, a time to explore, whether that's getting outside or just expanding your mind...

This Saturday, July 6th is the last day to see artist Alexandra Grant's "Born to Love" at Lowell Ryan Projects. The solo exhibition, from the artist's Antigone 3000 series, which revolves around Antigone's statement to her Uncle Creon in the play by Sophocles, "I was born to love not to hate," is at once playful, thought-provoking, political, feminist and powerful. Grant's large-scale and vivid tableaus on paper, a collage of text and paint, curves and straight lines, color and black and white, underline that Antigone, in choosing love over hate, rises above all opposition with her steadfast conviction, a fitting proposition for the present climate.